Informed Consent for Dental Procedures

You the patient have the right to accept or reject dental treatment recommended by your dentist. Prior to consenting to treatment, you should consider the anticipated benefits and commonly known risks of the recommended procedure (written below), alternative treatments (such as extraction, extensive restorations, periodontal (gum) treatment or crowns), or the option of no treat.

By consenting to treatment, you are acknowledging your willingness to accept known risks and complications, no matter how slight the probability of occurrences.

As with all dental procedures, there are commonly known risks and potential complications associated with treatment. No one can guarantee the success of the recommended treatment, or that you will not experience a complication or less than normal result. Even though many of these complications are rare, they can and do occur occasionally.

Some of the more commonly known risks and complications of treatment include, but are not limited to, the following:

- Pain, swelling and discomfort after treatment.
- Infection in need of medication, follow up procedures or other treatment.
- Temporary, or, on rare occasion, permanent numbness, pain, tingling or altered sensation of the lip, face, chin, gums, tongue, along with possible loss of taste.
- Damage to adjacent teeth, restoration of gums.
- Possible deterioration of your condition which may result in tooth loss.
- The need for replacement of restoration, implants or other appliances in the future.
- An altered bite in need of adjustment.
- Possible injury to the jaw joint and related structures requiring follow up care and treatment, or consultation by the dental specialist.
- A root tip, bone fragment or piece of dental instrument may be left in your body, and may have to be removed at a later time if symptoms develop.
- Jaw fracture.
- If upper teeth are treated, there is a chance of sinus infection or opening between the mouth and sinus cavity resulting in infection to anesthetic or medication.
- Need for the follow up care and treatment, including surgery.

If you fail to follow the advice of your dentist, you may increase the chances of a poor outcome. The patient is an important part of the treatment team. In addition to complying with the instructions given to you by the dentist, it is important to report any problem or complication you experience so they can be addressed by your dentist.

This form is intended to provide you with an overview of potential risks and complications. Do not sign this form to agree to treatment until you've read, understood and accepted each paragraph stated above. Be certain all of your concerns have been addressed to your satisfaction by your dentist before commencing treatment.
